BRINGING GOOD MU- SIC TO KANSAS CITY

The Story of the Conservatory

A dozen years ago there came to Kansas City a young man with a purpose. He hadn't much else, except a straight smile, a college education and a dogged determination.

He was from Boston, but even in Boston, the average man knows better than to attempt the impossible.

At least everybody said it was impossible, this all-pervading purpose. But they couldn't help thinking, afterward, of the cut of the young man's job, and

J. A. Cowan, Head of Kansas City Conservatory of Music wondering a little if anything was impossible to a smile so very straight and a jaw so well defined.

"It is my object," he said, "to give the people of Kansas City an institution similar to the New England Conservatory of Boston."

"Impossible," said one whose daughter was a student at the New England Conservatory. "Why, man, nobody but a fool would think of starting a conservatory in Kansas City."

"I'm the fool," replied the young man, whose jaw looked a little more prominent.

The Dream Comes True
Years have passed. A conservatory similar to the New England has been established in Kansas City.

Moreover, the man of wealth, who is also a man of fine culture, has cheerfully, even gladly, eaten his own words.

"You have achieved the impossible," he has said, "and I am the fool," or something like that. And he is today a substantial supporter of the undertaking.

It was a long time before Mr. Cowan even got the chance to tell the men of Kansas City what it was he wanted to give them. At the word "nausic" they shied and put on blinders for future protection. At the word "conservatory" they bucked and tried to leap the fence of the corral.

"I would run from a symphony orchestra as I would flee from the plague," said one Kansas City capitalist to Mr.
Cowan when he was trying to get a little backing in the early days of the conservatory. "Why, if there was a symphony concert across the hall I would call my chauffeur and drive out into the country."

The man meant what he said, but since that time his young people have gone to the conservatory and have brought music—good music—into their home, with the result that their father is a "bug" for the very music he once despised.

A Backbone of Steel

From the beginning the Kansas City Conservatory has developed on a sound business basis. Cowan got it rather a slogan among men who have watched it take hold of something that looked persistently like a foregone failure and make it a success. There is a tradition among the business men who have found it paid to promote the conservatory that instead of an ordinary backbone, President Cowan is equipped with a spinal column made of tempered steel.

This year the conservatory is in a new home at 1515 Linwood boulevard.

All branches of Music and Dramatic Art are taught. Catalogue will be sent upon request.—From Kansas City Star.

Demountable Rims

The 1916 Maxwell is equipped with demountable rims, and has the same size tire on all four wheels. Two vitally important features.

To replace a tire on the road it is only necessary to loosen five bolts; slip off the flat tire; slip on spare rim and tire; tighten three bolts, and proceed.

We are waiting to take you for a test ride in the car that has broken all low "First Cost" records, and is breaking all low "After-Cost" records.
